

17th ordinary Sunday

Today's gospel, Jesus performs a miracle of the multiplication of the loaves from five barley loaves and two fish given and offered selflessly by a little boy who is eager and willing to share a little of what he has. Surprisingly, Jesus is pleased with the offer. He proceeds to use it to feed five thousand men excluding children and women.

What Jesus wanting for us to do in this gospel is that we should be ready and willing to share and to give what we have to others especially those who are in need, those who are lacking and those who are in trouble financially, emotionally and spiritually.

I think and I'm sure that God really designed and intentionally did it that some of us would receive more graces from Him. It would be a talent, a time or treasures, like money and wealth, in order to test these people how big, are their hearts. Those who those who receive these graces coming from God have the duty and obligation to give to those who are lacking materially and in need not only of material things but also of their supports and assistance in their political, economical, emotional and spiritual wellbeing.

If we don't like to do all these things, just imagine that you are in their situation, that is, we the one being affected, what would be our reaction? Sad to say, those people who are given more than enough of what they need are like guitars that if nobody touch their strings they will not give their sounds of music. There are still so many whose consciences are numbed and callous, including mine and yours. We don't like to share because we are afraid that those by which have given to us will be lessened or reduced. But can we bring all these things when we die?

If we don't like to do all these things, just imagine that you are in their situation, that is, we the one being affected, what would be our reaction? Sad to say, those people who are given more than enough of what they need are like guitars that if nobody touch their strings they will not give their sounds of music. There are still so many whose consciences are numbed and callous, including mine and yours. We don't like to share because we are afraid that those by which have given to us will be lessened or reduced. But can we bring all these things when we die?

It is said that there are 7 kinds of giver. 1. first are those who are willing to give and they don't want anybody would stop to do so. But they give not for others' benefits but for themselves. So they are called auto-givers or self-providers.

2. Are those who give but do not come from their hearts. They seldom give.

3. Are those who give in order that their sins will be lessened. They give because their consciences keep on bothering them. They are called penitential givers.

4. Are those who give in order that they become the center of attraction. They want to be pictured and published in the newspapers. The media people should be around so that their charitable work is published in the newspapers, shown in television and aired in radio station.

5. Are those who give because they don't want to be criticized. They can give and we can count on them because they are rich.

6. Are those who think that they ought to give and it is their duty to give. And so they are called moral givers.

Lastly are those who love their fellow human being regardless of status. They have to give because they love them and not because they receive payment in return. When they give, it is really coming from their hearts. When they give they are happy for it. And so they are called spiritual givers.

My dear friends, to which of these seven types of givers do you belong? Then, let us reflect these words coming from John Michael Talbot, a Catholic musician: "God is the Master musician, we are His instruments. He crafts and tunes us. Christ is the Conductor who leads and guides those who play the music of the Master."

Inspirational quotes

It's not how much we give, but how much love we put into giving (MOTHER TERESA)

"No one has ever become poor by giving". (ANNE FRANK).

"There could be no definition of a successful life that does not include service to others".
( President George H.W. Bush)